The University of Oregon Law School will accept a maximum of 30 transfer credits toward the JD with the following provisos:

- Credits must be completed while enrolled at a fully accredited ABA Law School.
- Only coursework successfully completed with credit granted (including P) will be accepted.

Legal Research and Writing; 2 credits

Spring Semester

Legal Research and Writing; 3 credits

The Law School will generally consider the following courses as equivalent to the corresponding first year curriculum courses:

- Torts: 4 or more credits
- Contracts: 4 or more credits
- Property: 3 or more credits
- Civil Procedure: 3 or more credits
- Constitutional Law: 3 or more credits
- Criminal Law; 3 or more credits
- Legal Research and Writing: 4 or more total credits provided that the course included a written brief

Completion of these courses does not guarantee admission. Final determination regarding transfer of credit is at the discretion of the Law School Administration and Registrar's Office.

Courses that do not meet the above credit requirements will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis. Admitted transfer students who have not met the above requirements are required to complete the U of O Law School's mandatory first year curriculum, or the equivalent of, by the end of their second year of law studies.

Visiting Students:

U of O law students are eligible to visit any fully accredited ABA law school in their second and/or third year provided they meet program eligibility requirements (See Student Affairs for eligibility requirements). The U of O will accept maximum of 30 credits earned at an ABA accredited law school toward the JD. Coursework must be pre-approved by the Registrar or the Assistant Dean for Student Affairs, with the following considerations:

- Credit will not be awarded for coursework completed at the visiting school that has already been completed at the U of O Law School
- Credit will not be awarded for Legal Profession and Constitutional Law II without review and approval of a visiting school's course description and / or syllabus by the U of O Law School faculty.
